

First Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of Foreign Affairs of the Republic of Serbia Ivica Dacic attended today the marking of the Gallipoli Battle centenary in the Republic of Turkey.

Turkish President Recep Tayyip Erdogan and Prince Charles of Wales together paid their respects to those who had lost their lives in one of World War One's bloodiest campaigns.

The ceremony was also attended by President of Ireland Michael Higgins, Australian Prime Minister Tony Abbott, Prime Minister of New Zealand John Key, British Prince Harry, and also Presidents, Prime Ministers and Foreign Affairs Ministers of approximately thirty countries.
