

First Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of Foreign Affairs of the Republic of Serbia Ivica Dacic today received Mr. Giorgos Koumoutsakos, Head of foreign policy sector in the leading Greek opposition party, the New Democracy.

In the talks, both sides estimated that the bilateral relations between the Republic of Serbia and the Hellenic Republic were based on strong friendship and time-tested closeness and solidarity between the two peoples, going beyond politics of any kind.

Giorgos Koumoutsakos conveyed the full understanding and support of the New Democracy concerning the preservation of sovereignty and territorial integrity of the Republic of Serbia, and its European integration process.

In the talks, the collocutors also discussed current developments in the region, in which context a strong interest and commitment on the part of Serbia and Greece were expressed to contribute as much as possible to all processes in support of stability in the region.
