

Exhibition Constantine – 1700th anniversary of Constantine's Edict, housed in the Museum of the Roman Forum in Rome, is extended until 16 February thanks to the visitors' lively interest.

The exhibits of the Serbian artist Veljko Mihajlovic include more than 40 copper etchings depicting Saint Constantine, the first Christian Emperor, and his mother, Empress Saint Helena, and revealing the motives of Orthodox iconography, and the multilayered cultural and art heritage both from Serbia and the region.

Even though it was initially planned that the exhibition should close on 12 January, it was extended due to the keen interest expressed by the connoisseurs, the media, representatives of the diplomatic corps, and numerous tourists.

The exhibition featured in the news and was covered by Corriere della Sera, Rai 2, TG 4 and almost all the Roman media, including the specialized ones.

The exhibition was opened on 28 November 2013 in a museum monthly visited by around 10 000 visitors on average.
