Economic relations:

Serbian exports in 2013 amounted to EUR 164 million, and imports to approximately EUR 226 million.

Despite the global and Greek economic crises, there has been no impasse in the business activities implemented by Greek business entities operating in Serbia, and Greece remains one of the largest investors in Serbia (around EUR 2.2 billion investments' worth), even though no major fresh investments have been placed in the Republic of Serbia over the past few years.

Bilateral economic cooperation is particularly developed in areas such as banking, energy, real estate, hotel management and cement production.
