

A screening of the film about Serbia's participation in World War I was held at the city hall in Nancy, in attendance of French academics and history students as well as officials of Nancy's civic structures, Honorary Consuls of certain countries and Serbian citizens residing in this part of France.

The screening was also attended by Mr. Jean-Michel Berlemont, Deputy Mayor for international relations, European and cross-border cooperation, as well as by his team who contributed significantly to the success of the event. In his remarks, Mr. Berlemont spoke affirmatively about Serbia and the traditional friendship between our peoples, which preceded a roundtable discussion about the Great War that followed the film's screening.

Participants of the roundtable discussion included history professor Jean-Noël Grandhomme, journalist Guillaume Mazo, correspondent for the Grand Est regional newspaper, T. Glamcevski, the curator of the Nancy summer festival, and also history students attending the local university.
