

An exhibition of paintings entitled "Slovak Naïve Art in Serbia" was staged at UN Headquarters in New York by Permanent Missions of Serbia and Slovakia to the United Nations and opened by Permanent Representatives of the two countries, Ambassadors Milan Milanovic and Michal Mlynár, on 21 May.

"Slovaks in Serbia are successful in many vocations today, while the Serbian cultural life takes great pride in naïve painters from the Slovak community. Their artistry enables them to integrate into the broader community, while preserving their core identity. At the same time, they are forging subtle ties of friendship between their country of origin and the country that welcomed them with open arms under its wing", said Ambassador Milanovic.

President of the UN General Assembly Miroslav Lajčák and UN Under-Secretary-General for Global Communications Alison Smale attended the opening as guests of honour and made statements, as did Pavel Babka, Director of the Babka Foundation from Kovačica.

New York: Exhibition of Slovak naïve art from Serbia at UN Headquarters

Tuesday, 22 May 2018.

Addressing negativity, the exhibition on display at the UN was organized on 25 May cultural