

The Serbian Consulate General in Hamburg was open on the night of 23 May as it participated in the Long Night of Consulates, an event of the Europe Week sponsored by the Senate of Hamburg.

Those visiting the Consulate General that night were able to watch short feature films about the tourist offer in Serbia and sample Serbian specialties. Serbian nationals attending the Hamburg University of Music and Theatre performed classical music pieces, while "Mladost" sing and dance group presented Serbian traditional dances.

Among the numerous audiences, the Consulate was visited by Dorothee Stapelfeldt, Senator for Urban Development and Environment of Hamburg, Murat Gözay, MP of the Alliance 90/The Greens Hamburg in the local Parliament and Ian Karan, the city's former Minister of Economic Affairs.
