

Acting Assistant Foreign Minister for Security Policy, Ambassador Branimir Filipović opened "Fifth Belgrade NATO Week" along with Ambassador Tacan Ildem, NATO Assistant Secretary General for Public Diplomacy, Benjamin Hodges, Commander US Army Europe, Kyle Scott, US Ambassador to Serbia and Mateja Norčić Štamcar, Deputy Head of the EU delegation to Serbia.

The meeting, held on 16 and 17 November, was organized by the Center for Euro-Atlantic Studies with the support of NATO Department for Public Diplomacy and the US Embassy.

Acting Assistant Minister pointed out that this year again "NATO Week" presented a good opportunity to discuss a host of issues and provide additional information related to the purpose and functioning of NATO and its relations with other international organizations within a broad range of participants including institutions of the Republic of Serbia, NATO, EU, the Alliance Member States and partners but also representatives of the academic and non-governmental sector and media. Most importantly, it was an opportunity to present Serbia's activities in cooperation with NATO through PfP program, the results of Serbia's ten-year-long partnership cooperation as well as ideas for this cooperation in the forthcoming period.
