A rain-speckled Serbian rendezvous in the Capital

Eni Ball
Generous hospitality and an evening of joyous chatter warmed up Serbia's National Day reception, held recently in the Capital. In Serbia, the day marks the anniversary of the First Serbian Uprising of 1804 and the first Serbian Constitution in 1835.

Reading out a message from the President of Serbia, ambassador Vladimir Marić, extended sympathies to the families of CRPF soldiers killed in the Pulwama attack. As the rain gods played hide-and-seek, the august company moved indoors. But music filled the air from as rain-drenched guests mingled over drinks of the rošnišerie shawarma and a delectable spread of Indian dishes.

Among those who were present at the event included the ambassador of Russia to India, Nikolay Kadoshev, ambassador of the Czech Republic to India, Milan Hovorka, Indijske novine „Tajmz of Indija“ i „Hindustan tajmz“ objavile su foto-izveštaje o prijemu u bašti Ambasade Srbije u Nju Delhiju povodom Dana državnosti Srbije u kojima je preneto da je ambasador Vladimir Marić pročitao poruku predsednika Srbije, te da je prijem počeo minutom ćutanja za stradale u Pulvami.

U izveštajima indijskih medija podvlači se i srdačna i šaljiva atmosfera u Ambasadi Srbije, koja je, kako je prijem bio napolju, povremeno prekidana pljuskovima, za koje je rečeno da „donose sreću“.
